(NP9904) Iraqi Camp Charlie National Police Compound: (TRA Level 3) FOB Reo Police Transition Team PTT conducted IP training on the ERU (Emergency Response Unit) compound in the areas of police close combat techniques and basic first aid. Training was well received and students appeared motivated.

The Team spoke with Colonel [redacted], ERU Commander. No electricity continues to be a problem in conducting training. The Team transports its own generator to provide power for the Biometric system. The IPS is reluctant to keep the main generator operational in the heat. Vehicles are needed for training and movement of ERU. Currently, the Colonel has to borrow vehicles from other departments to move his personnel to and from Kalsu for training as there are no vehicles available to effectively teach felony stops, vehicle search, vehicle maintenance and other police reaction training from vehicles. 10% of the 120 vehicle allocation requested for this unit would relieve the immediate problem. The IP, led by CPT [redacted], were on a mission in AL-Hwaesh city when an IP patrol was struck by an IED. Two IP were KIA. This occurred approximately 500 meters from the train tracks entering the town. PTT assisted in getting the QRF IP in route to that location. This later turned out to be a problem as CPT [redacted] was very upset that QRF did not respond and assist in a timely matter. CPT [redacted] quickly addressed that issue and made very clear points that all IP understood.

The judge states that he also feels that incidence of traffic accidents are steadily increasing, especially on the one-hundred meter road. Judge [redacted] related that the Traffic Police need to take more aggressive action in traffic enforcement. He noted that major shortcomings in the communication systems of the police and the judicial system detract from the timeliness and quality of the investigations. He stated because the government has not provided reliable electric and communication capability that much of the matters presented to the court lack the timely investigative efforts of the police and investigators of the Ministry of Justice. Police are forced to, in some instances, hire taxis to provide transportation for themselves, the defendant and investigative material including case files. Matters which require quick decisions sometimes are delayed, evidence is then lost or defendants flee the area. Judge [redacted] related that use of the internet and wireless communication would greatly enhance the capability of the Ministry of Justice and Police Investigations. He further related that most of the codes which the Judges and Police are working with were formulated over forty years ago. Revisions are required to instill confidence in the Courts, Police and Justice for the Citizens. He related that many of the crimes are not reported and some that are reported without a known suspect and high probability of successful prosecution do not gain a formal report. Further training of new police, investigators and judges who do not rely on the counsel of the older previous system will make the system more transparent and gain the confidence of the citizens. Judge [redacted] advised the PTT that he would contact a Judicial Investigator to work and explain the organization duties and responsibility of the Judicial Investigators and their current material and training needs assessment to the Police Transition Team.
